PEAK PLEADED GUILTY OF MURDER.

Verdict in the Second Degree.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., May 26 .- A genuine mantion was created in court here this norping when Barclay Peak pleaded guilty of the murder of Katie Anderson, his cousin. What was more remarkable was Judge Gar rison's instructions to the jury. He charged rison's instructions to the jury. He charged them to bring in a verdict of murder in the second degree and the Court would assume the responsibility.

The jury brought in a verdict of murder in the second degree, Peak will be sentenced probably next week to imprisonment for life.

This is Peak's second trial, the former trial resulting in a verdict of "murder in the first degree." On February 23 the Supreme Court of New Jersey granted Peak a new trial.

first degree." On February 23 the Supreme Court of New Jersey granted Peak a new trial.

The Court held that the manner of drawing the jury was wrong. It was alleged that the Sheriff did not draw the panel from the box, but that he selected the forty-eight men with the assistance of the Prosecutor of the Pleas. The latter denied the charge, but as the Court overruled the exception taken the charge remained on the record.

The Chief-Justice said that the proceeding must be considered as it appears on the record. It was an illegal proceeding. Chief-Justice Beasley dwelt upon the admissibility of the dying declaration of the girl. The dying declaration of the girl. The thought, possessed no evidential force. He thought she had no complete conviction that her death was at hand.

A strange feature of the case, the Chief-Justice said, was the absence of a homicidal motive. When Barclay Peak heard that the girl was found murdered by the roadside he hastened to her chamber. If he had shot her he had every reason to believe that she would then and there charge him with the act.

But he showed no fear that she would accuse or denounce him. In the presence of relatives she told Peak that the person who shot her was "a dirty, nasty reacal." To ber father, who questioned her about the shooting, she said "it was too bad, but she could not help it."

The Chief-Justice referred to the fact that Peak embraced and kissed the girl, and that he begged her to tell him who shot her, and that she never then intimated that he was the guilty one.

The Chief-Justice thought that all the evithat she never then intrinsted that he was the guilty one.

The Chief Justice thought that all the evidence harmonized with a theory of his own, that the killing was accidental. He believed that Peak attempted to commit an assault on the girl, and that she drew the pistol to defend her honor and in the scuffle she was shot

Her reticence and her failure to accuse Peak, his conduct, and every other feature surrounding the case harmonized with this theory.

Col. Fellows is quoted as saying last night that he thought he could get in the remainder of his evidence in the trial of Thomas B. Kerr and complete the case for the prosecution

Perhaps that was why the round and ruddy face of the ex-Treasurer of the Broadway road wore a look of confidence and contentment when Justice Patterson opened court self a big job for the time allotted.

In the minds of most men who have at-tended the trial, Col. Fellows had set himself a big job for the time allotted.

The District-Atterney, with the invaluable ald of Bourke Cockran, had succeeded in proving a strong case against Jacob Sharp and James W. Foshny, the dead railway manipulators, But Kerr?

The combative Cockran had been awake and alert throughout the trial. He had more to say than Judge, prosecutor and witnesses combined. He had inserted fine-edged legal wedges between the proposed testimony and the jury, and almost everything which had been admitted as testimony was harmless to the defendant.

That wily old jurist, ex-Judge Noah Davis, sitting quietly behind the big frame of his younger associate, had had a weather eye open, peering between the spread fingers which he held in front of his face, and an occasional suggestion to Cockran yielded fruit in freah points made by the latter.

Col. Fellows began operations to-day by reading the testimony given by Isaae V. Brockaw, the clothiers, on the Sharp trial, the witness being in Europe. Mr. Brockaw bought $50,000 worth of the second mortgage bonds of Foshny and at his request fixed a check so that the money could be obtained on it at once.

Jacob Loewenhart, the first witness of the day, testified that Foshay gave him an order to lithograph 500 $1,000-dollar bonds and wanted them very quickly.

Ex-Alderman William H. Miller, who voted for the franchise, but, though indicted, was not one of the combine of thirteen aldermanic freebooters, was next called.

The ex-Alderman's black beard was freshly trimmed, and his sleek hair was smoothly brushed. He testified in a low voice, and twirled a pair of eye-glasses as he related his story, with frequent interruptions by Mr. Cockran, who objected to everything, took exceptions to everything.

He said that Alderman De Lacy handed him an envelope a day or two after the passage of the franchise to the Broadway surface road, on August 6, 1884. The envelope contained $5,000 in one thousand and and five hundred dollar bills.

On Aug. 30, at 6 in the afternoon he received a notice to attend the meeting of the Board of Aldermen which occurred at 9 o'clock that morning. The notice was postmarked 11.30 a, M.

The officers are very reticent about the affair, but from what they said it appears that the three students visited the clubroom Thursday night and asked Gentleman where they could get some opium. He told them he could get some for them, and did so, it is alleged, after which he accompanied them to their room in Cambridge and spent the night smoking with them.

When arrested, Gentleman told substantially the following story: The young men wanted him to get them some opium, and he took them to a Chinese place on Harrison avenue, and, after securing the drug went to their room. Mills as once commenced to smoke in a way that he felt obliged to warn him. Mills said that he had smoked before, and that he knew how to use it, and kept on smoking, as did also his companions. They smoked, said Gentleman, from 1 a. M., until 6 a. M., and then dropped into a stupor. Soon after I saw that Mills was groaning and sent for Dr. Wesselhoeit, and we worked over him until 11 a. M. I told the doctor they had been smoking opium, and we chafed their hands, rubbed them and applied the stomach pump until 11 a. M., when the doctor said they were out of danger, and I left.
